The Indian Medical Association (IMA) on Wednesday confirmed the appointment of Ampira Friedmansand Gumenenda Litaviusz as their president and vice-president respectively.

Harald Herberggoldberg, joint president, said "We are very pleased to welcome Ampira Friedmansand Gumenenda to our leadership team."

The association also thanked the institute for the help it provided the association in the application of the Indian Medical Association (IMA) of the Americas, the IMA Australia and the International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War (IPAPPW).

Donna Gollogly, operations director, IMA, and Martin L. Quittell, executive director of the Ministry of Health in the West Indies, along with D'Amma Lattanzio, chief medical officer for the office of health under under the Assistant Minister for Culture and Welfare, said "... the association has a profound value to the Indian government, emphasising the need for governmental support for health education and improving the health of population."

"We note that this is the first time this association has worked with the West Indies government in offering to provide funds, particularly among the critically ill and vulnerable, for the training of healthcare providers for native population of Indian caregivers," they said.

The IMA said that its position is for the association to provide support for the University of NSW and joint specialists with the University of Pennsylvania will be helping as it does for the West Indies in this respect.
